Sunday services have resumed in the building. Please join us in person or via Zoom.

UUCC COVID UPDATE: The UUCC Board of Trustees has lifted Covid restrictions in the church. The congregation can determine their own level of risk and any need to continue to wear a mask in public settings. The only exception to this will be when we have in-church speakers who may request that congregants wear a mask during their service. We will notify you ahead of time if this occurs.

A congregation in a small church such as ours is sort of a family. And as with all families, from time to time, problems may arise. Maybe someone says something that hurts the feelings of another. Maybe words are exchanged. All of a sudden, lines have been drawn and there is a problem. Sometimes others are drawn into it as well. What can be done to resolve this? That is what I want to address here.

It is especially important for us as a small congregation to maintain right relationships with one another. When people have problems, others may be affected as well. It can divide congregations in half. Something like that happened at UUCC many years ago when a minister named Rev. Hoagland came to our congregation. Rev. Hoagland's style as an experienced minister appeared to conflict with the inexperienced congregation which had been started by individuals who had no formal training in the profession. What resulted was that a wedge was effectively created among the members and the congregation voted to terminate Rev. Hoagland.

What resources does UUCC have today for problem resolution? When a church has a minister, it is usually up to that person to resolve issues between members by talking everything through. But UUCC has not had a minister since about 2012. We are on our own to resolve any disputes.

I recall that years ago Pat Segner used to be involved in the Committee on Ministry which would provide remediation between members with problems. I also know that Richard Lewis has stepped in to mediate more recently. Mediation is difficult, especially in light of the size of our congregation. Now that we lack a minister, we need a similar resource at hand. I believe that it is important that we have something in place in case it is needed.

Last year, Bev Feldt and I put together a new policy for UUCC based on UUA guidelines to deal with disruptive personalities within our church community. We felt that we needed to have this to deal with a situation that had developed, and so we used it and had a successful outcome. Then late last year I requested that we create a new team of trusted individuals in the congregation to form a permanent group to deal with any problems that might come up in the future. This group would not need to meet unless they were called on for help. Initially we called it the "Committee on Disruptive Behavior." Later the group preferred the name "The Right Relations Task Force." I think I prefer their title better.

We do have another tool to guide us in our relations with one another. It is our covenant, which states:

"To preserve congregational wholeness by addressing conflict promptly and directly. First, we will talk with and listen to the person or persons with whom we have unresolved differences. If, after an open and empathetic exchange of feelings, points of view, and possible solutions we have not resolved our conflict, we will quickly seek the counsel of congregational mediators."

The message this passage gives us is to first talk through your problems to seek resolution, and if that does not work, seek additional help. Each person who signs the covenant and becomes a member of this church is signing onto this set of values. This is the basis of what we fundamentally believe as UUs.

There are ways to resolve any problems that you might have with others: talk one on one and attempt to resolve it. And if you cannot come to a resolution, please seek help from those special, caring individuals who can help. Let's use our covenant to provide a guide as a way to achieve these goals.

UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST COMMUNITY CHURCH COVENANT

We, the members of the Unitarian Universalist Community Church, in order to sustain a community whose members live according to their deepest principles, establish this covenant as a guide to our relationships with ourselves, with each other, with our neighbors, and with the world. We covenant:

To live our belief that every person has inherent worth and dignity. We will treat each other with respect and good humor, assuming the good intentions of all. We will strive to bring to all our interactions compassion, honesty and kindness. By fully listening to one another, we endeavor to gain a greater appreciation of each individual's gifts and enriching uniqueness.

To foster one another's spiritual growth. We will cherish differing paths and enjoy the thoughtful exchange of ideas, experiences and intuitions. We will conduct our continuing dialogue with patience and joy, welcoming diversity of views and persons.

To participate respectfully in the larger world. We will seek to live our values within the greater community in ways that encourage service, invite conversation, and engender understanding.

To pledge our abilities, time, energy, and financial support to the purposes of this community. We will commit these resources wisely, so that we can fulfill our promises. We will encourage and support the fullest participation of each member and friend and, as a community, will celebrate and appreciate the contributions of all.

To employ the democratic process as the rule of our community, both as leaders and as members. We will conduct all dealings of the church in an open, honest and responsible way. We will seek and share information about all important church issues and contribute our informed opinion. We will respect the deliberated consensus of the community and continue to seek common goals through the exploration of diverse ideas.

To preserve congregational wholeness by addressing conflict promptly and directly. First, we will talk with and listen to the person or persons with whom we have unresolved differences. If, after an open and empathetic exchange of feelings, points of view, and possible solutions we have not resolved our conflict, we will quickly seek the counsel of congregational mediators.

I promise to use the spirit of this covenant as a guide to my behavior in relationship with my church community. Within the circle of the congregation, I ask others to name my actions that fulfill this covenant and to honor them; when my actions are contrary to its spirit, I ask others to name them as well and to recall me to this covenant in a loving and forgiving way. I accept the responsibility to do the same for others.

I do so covenant.	(Signed)		(Date)

Volunteer Opportunities!

There are many interesting tasks that need attention. Would you like to help?

Are you willing to commit to a Sunday or two each month? We need Ushers and Greeters, Zoom hosts and Sexton setup assistance. This is your church, help to make our Sunday services and events happen. Please get involved! Contact Marilyn Ragland mexmasrag@aol.com) for details on the Sexton team; Joyce Sligar (jsligar02@gmail.com) for Ushers and Greeters; and Jodi Libretti

Art And Pep produced by Mercedes Kane & Nate Freyman was shown at Governors State University's Summer Showcase on July 6th. I watched it because Mercedes had shown her previous film "Today We Saw The Face of God" at UUCC years ago. The film is about Art & Pep, 2 men in a 50 year love relationship who ran a gay bar on North Halsted Street in Chicago.

Illinois is the first state to decriminalize homosexuality. Chicago was on the front lines of the AIDS epidemic. Art & Pep became social activists because their friends were dying. It was gay bars that transformed into Community Centers and so masterfully fought for medical coverage and HIV drugs. They formed a camaraderie that changed anti-discriminatory laws and fostered marriage equality. Art & Pep were present at GSU and their love relationship was so evident. I was just so happy to be invited by Suzanne Patterson of The Knowledge Exchange.

Mercedes' documentary features real Chicago people like Mayor Daley and Mayor Lori Lightfoot. The men even got Catholic nuns to lobby the Chicago Alderman who were Catholic and opposed to gays rights. How could you argue that you were Catholic against a Nun (who was committed to human rights)? Nuns don't answer to city government. I know, I was educated by nuns. The Art and Pep film is scheduled to be on Hulu Art and is now streaming on Peacock. Highly recommended by me, and thanks to Mercedes Kane & Nate Freyman for making the film.

Allan Lindrup will do a Forum after the service on September 10th on his experiences at GA. Beryl Atchinson and I also attended in person. Laurene Lambertino-Urquizo was a delegate virtually. Conversations will be continuing for the next year about changes to our principles, divestment from fossil fuels and reparations.

When the Unitarians joined the Universalists, a woman gave the denomination an oil well in the North Sea. The church near it is called "Shelter Rock". That oil well has given us millions of dollars to do Social Justice work.

I am against taking money out of our invested funds for reparations. I consider that money to be an emergency fund for our church. 67% of the delegates at GA voted that way too. But conversations will continue into 2024.

Leanne Mull and I will do a "Safety Sermon" for our church on September 3rd. I had attended a three hour workshop from the UUA on security. That and my experiences on the Safety Team while in person at GA prompts me to share some Knowledge.

I also found the young people at the Pittsburgh General Assembly to be refreshingly flexible and compassionate.

GREEN SANCTUARY BY JEFF GREEN - AUGUST 2023

Climate wise these past few months have given us a glimpse into how human caused climate change can affect us. All kinds of heat records are being set in the southern United States, the Canadian forest fires bringing their smoke to us, the extreme rains.

All these are symptoms of climate change. But what are we doing about it? Luckily congress passed the IRA law, Inflation Reduction Act. This is giving a nice boost to installing renewable energy in the United States. The reason to do so, is to get to zero pollution of greenhouse gases as quick as we can.

Human caused climate change has this dark side to it with all the negatives it is putting on us. So, it is good to focus on the hope that we can do something about it. I ran across this article in Grist that shines a light on how IRA law is projected out to improve our increase in our use of renewable energy.

https://grist.org/politics/one-year-in-the-inflation-reduction-act-is-working-kind-of/

The report, the ninth edition of Rhodium's annual emissions assessment, found that the IRA and state-level climate bills that have been signed into law by governors across the country in recent years will drive emissions down between 29 and 42 percent in 2030, compared to 2005 levels. By 2035, greenhouse gas emissions will decrease between 32 and 51 percent. Prior to the IRA's passage, the nation was on track to cut emissions by 26 to 41 percent by 2035, according to Rhodium's estimate from 2022. Rhodium called the overall reductions "a meaningful departure from previous years' expectations for the U.S. emissions trajectory."

Thanks to the IRA's subsidies, solar and wind energy are already becoming a lot cheaper: solar by nearly 40 percent and wind by 55 percent. The legislation will also influence the speed with which electric vehicles replace gas-powered cars. In 2035, electric vehicles will comprise between one-third and two-thirds of all passenger car sales, the report said.

So it is good to focus on the hope that we can do something about it. It is challenging to do what we are in the world today with our long history of creating a modern society with fossil fuels. How can we possibly change out of them when we are so used to its service. The downside of the IRA law is that it is all carrot and no stick within the law. There isn't anything in this to slow down fossil fuel use. It's all up to us to adapt to renewable energy. As I talk to people, there is a great deal of reluctance to change.

We have challenges ahead that require us to think and adjust to what is happening in the world. Changing the fundamental way we make and use energy is a big deal. It takes patience as we interact with our fellow world citizens. A lot of people are confused and possibly angry with what they are experiencing internally with themselves.

Thank you for letting Green Sanctuary come into your home and your lives.

Celebrate Lammas or Lughnasa on August 1st

Lammas, also known as Lughnasa, is the first of three harvest celebrations in the Wheel of the Year. It is celebrated on August 1st, halfway between the summer solstice and the fall equinox. This holiday is all about rejoicing in abundance—abundance of the garden, abundance of light, and abundance of spirit. The harvest has begun, the weather is warm and fall is just on the horizon. To celebrate, be intentional, soak up what remains of summer and make the most of the waning light.

Here are some suggestions on how to honor Lammas:

- Bake Bake bread from scratch in honor of the abundant grain harvest. Making bread is a process that makes you slow down, pause and think. As you knead and form the bread, set intentions for yourself.
- Decorate Adorn your home and altar with symbols of high summer and the start of the harvest. Use warm colors such as yellow, gold and red. Include elements of the harvest with apples, grapes, or stalks of grain. Sunflowers add brightness and cheer.
- Toast the Sunset In this season, the light has begun to recede. Take some time to honor the sunset. Find a quiet, natural setting to enjoy the sun as it slides over the horizon. Bring a picnic basket and toast the abundance created by the summer sun.
- Gather If you have a garden, gather in some of your bounty. If you do not have a garden, visit a pick-your-own farm to appreciate the bounty, or perhaps a visit to the local farmer's market to bring in a harvest from there.

The Corn King gives his life for the land, We toast his sacrifice with Ale in our hand, And eat the bread from the harvest made, As sheaves of corn to the earth are laid. Transformation surrounds us, The harvest turned to food and drink, Now is the time to learn and think, Of what we can do to grow even stronger, As the summer recedes and the nights grow longer. We share our rewards and bless the earth, That brings our fruitful abundance to birth, May our well-earned bounty reward our toil, As we harvest the seed and the grain from the soil.

Greetings Family,

"The Soundtrack of Our Lives "is today's H3O Art of Life Blog which was written by Rev. Ms. Denise Tracy, a member of the Faculty of Omni-U Virtual University. Rev. Tracy's interest in a wide range of musical genres included an interesting "Playlist" which we took the liberty of augmenting by providing links to the music listed in her presentation.

As often as possible, we chose the artist that was identified by Rev. Ms. Tracy. However, in most other cases, we chose those who were familiar to us.
